Reading

9 Read the article about an expedition to Mars. Choose the options: A, B, C or D which you think fit best according to the text.

Dreaming of Mars

A Starting a colony on Mars sounds like science fiction. That's probably because people have been imagining journeys to Mars for a long time, but so far, no one has got close. One failed mission to Mars was actually planned to take place in 2024. Interestingly, the expedition wasn't organised by a government agency like NASA. It was carried out by a private organisation based in the USA. They tried raising money by asking for donations and by selling the rights to sponsor the expedition and broadcast it on TV.

B What's more, they weren't going to send professional astronauts. They looked for volunteers to take part and over 200,000 people applied! They even selected the first four people to go: two men and two women. The organisers said that successful applicants needed to be creative, curious about the world, adaptable and trustworthy. They also needed to be physically fit and have a basic command of English.

C The final round of the selection process consisted of a simulation of life on Mars where groups of four candidates were expected to demonstrate their ability to live and work together in extremely harsh conditions. They planned that equipment, accommodation and food have been transported here, a long time before the crew of four made it to the Red Planet. Consequently, they would have had everything they needed once they landed.

D The expedition would have been very expensive and the journey to Mars would have lasted eight months or so. For this reason, participants would only have been given a one-way ticket - there was no possibility of coming back! Furthermore, relations between the four of them would have been pretty intense as no new arrivals were scheduled until three or four years later! So perhaps it was for the best that the mission ran out of money before it could be completed!

1 A human mission to Mars
- A has nearly been completed.
- B will always be fictional.
- C was organised in 2024.
- D is not a new idea.

2 The organisation responsible for the expedition
- A was connected to the government in the Netherlands.
- B needed a lot of money to support the project.
- C thought it could make a lot of money from the expedition.
- D was similar to NASA.

3 What was the response to the project?
- A A lot of people were able to take part.
- B Over 200,000 people became volunteers.
- C There was a lot of interest.
- D Too few people wanted to go to Mars.

4 What qualities did the candidates need?
- A They needed to be able to work in a team.
- B They needed to be creative and artistic.
- C They needed to have lived in extremely harsh conditions.
- D They needed to speak English perfectly.

5 When the first four people arrived on Mars, they …
- A wouldn't have had any contact with Earth.
- B would have needed to build their accommodation.
- C wouldn't have had any immediate problems surviving.
- D would have needed to look for somewhere to live.

6 What or who does they (underlined in section C) refer to?
- A the candidates
- B food and accommodation
- C the crew that would transport the first people who live on Mars
- D the first people who landed
